PROGETTO FUOCO POSTPONED IN MAY PUTTING BEHIND THE EVENT WILL ENSURE UTMOST SAFETY
AND THE ATTENDANCE OF FOREIGN VISITORS
"A SHARED DECISION WITH OPERATORS AND ASSOCIATIONS"

Raul Barbieri, general manager of Piemmeti has pointed out: "The new dates in the trade fair calendar have been chosen to allow as much time as possible to present the market news"

Verona, 10 January 2022 - New dates have been pinned down for Progetto Fuoco, the most important world trade show in the biomass heating sector. It will be held in Verona from 4 to 7 May 2022. The decision to postpone the event, which initially was scheduled for the end of February, was taken because of the ongoing uncertainty and concern due to the pandemic. It is a responsible choice that Piemmeti, the company promoting the event, has shared with the exhibitors and trade associations involved. The new dates have been identified as the best possible ones in the Veronafiere calendar. It will be a period of the year which will allow the safe attendance of numerous national and foreign operators.

«It was obviously not an easy choice. It was made with great responsibility towards all exhibitors and partners», has declared Raul Barbieri, the general manager of Piemmeti. «In any case, we expect that this event will live up to its traditional attendance standards of operators and professional visitors. It will be held in the utmost safety conditions. The event will take place when, following the rapid progress of the vaccination campaign, the current uncertainty will be overcome, so that international connections will be re-established».

Progetto Fuoco 2022

From stoves to fireplaces passing through boilers, barbecues and wood and pellet stoves. Progetto Fuoco is the reference event for this sector and its engines are running at full capacity. Biomass heating companies, which have resisted the lockdown quite well, are trampling in view of the 2022 event, the international reference fair where all news is presented. This event will be held in total safety as anti-Covid health regulations will be strictly followed, thus protecting all participants. Along with the exhibitions there will be conferences, workshops, practical demonstrations and training opportunities.

Innovation will be the main protagonist of the fair and will be structured in three initiatives: the Innovation Village, gathering the best Italian and European startups, "Give Me Fire - Progetto Fuoco Startup Award", the award for the best technology of the sector and the Hackathon, a proper marathon for young innovators. Progetto Fuoco is the privileged platform for exchanging information and updates on biomass heating systems, while always remaining strongly business-oriented.

- Progetto Fuoco, scheduled from 4 to 7 May 2022 at Verona Fiere. 800 brands and 75,000 visitors are expected. It is the most important 2022 international event dedicated to the heating sector and wood fuels.
